WHY: The automotive retail industry has struggled to find ways to make online car-buying completely digital while offering consumers convenience and transparency. While online vehicle selling, buying, and servicing tools exist, the experience for consumers remains fragmented. With Glovebox, Asbury aims to create a seamless and customized experience at all points of the car-buying and servicing process.

In partnership with an advanced automotive technology company, Asbury has developed a communications technology ecosystem that will allow for customers to use just one tool to buy a vehicle, service a vehicle, trade in their existing vehicle with a to-the-penny loan payoff, get real payment information using actual interest rates and local taxes and fees, select personalized F&I products, choose from multiple lenders and rate offers from different banks instead of one, make payments entirely online, sign documents digitally, and select store pick up or delivery.
